Raoul is originally from Switzerland where he played club soccer between the ages of seven to eighteen. He stopped playing soccer as he shifted his focus entirely to waterpolo which he played for nine years at the highest levels. After a long hiatus Raoul started coaching soccer for his daughters' teams here in San Diego. Both girls are still playing for Blast SC. Coaching them and their teammates has been an incredible and rewarding experience for him and his family. His love for soccer stems from it being a team sport where success depends on individual performance, communication, and support within the team. He likes to inspire the players to have fun as they refine their technical and tactical skills using challenging games and drills. The goal is for the team to slowly learn how to play a fast paced contemporary style of soccer.
